

Chicago Tribune

HEADPHONES

Big improvement for smaller heads

KidzMouse Ears headphones ($20-25) are designed for small heads, and since most headsets are made for big people's noggins, parents may be glad to know there's an alternative for kids.

The headsets come in two designs (firefly and bee) and two sizes. Sound quality is about the same as other inexpensive headsets that lack noise reduction capability to block outside noise.

However, using a headset that fits is better for kids than having to hold a headset on with one hand while operating the device with the other. Details at www.kidzmouse.com.

Knight Ridder/Tribune